We are glad to greet the Waco Examines again on our table. It looks like old times and is fully up to its reputation as one of the leading organs of the State. The recent fire which destroyed the office seems not to have curtailed its worth or daunted the energy of Major Downs, its excellent manager. We wish it many years of prosperity.—Rockdate Messeager.

OUR SITUATION

It is gratifying to be able to look over our fair city and feel a strong situation and condition it is most admirably constituted to preserve the most precious of all earthly blessings-Health. Especially in times of pestilence, it is reassuring to feel that reasonable and well grounded hopes of exemption may be indulged in. Taking into consideration the condition of Waco just now with the vigilant efforts that are being made to enforce and carry out a perfect system of cleaning up streets, which were at first in good order we have little to apprehend from malignant sickness of any kind. One thing which renders this particular locality admirable in point of health is the perfect drainage afforded by the river. For ten miles on each side of the river, a gradual slope carries of al the superbundant waters during the rainy season, and that slope continued to the waters edge give to Waco a drainage which in large cities can only be obtained at vast expense by artificial means. It may be safely asserted that the soil beneath our city for the depth of twenty-four Democrats almost to a man, who feet is perfectly free from all those joined the movement, have now noxious elements which in an im-perfectly drained country lurk and fester and furnish abundant seeds of disease or food upon which disease fattens. Beneath this twenty-four feet of dry soil is living pure water in bed of gravel, and dirt so that there are no lurking foes beneath.

At a distance from ponds and lakes there is none of that humidity which, carrying with it noxious gases and vapors formed from decomposing matter which, if it do not breed disease at least forms a medium through which it can be propagated, and material by which germs of disease are most likely fed. With a pure air, absence of all noxious humidity and the perfect drainage and pure soil beneath, Waco, with herattention to cleanliness, need have little fear of Pipes disease. If the yellow fever should visit us, against which there are a hundred chances to one that it will not, it would soon die for want of those natural instruments in earth and in air, on which it subsists and is propagated. In summary our height above the sea level, the perfeet drainage and dry subjacent soil with the other healthy conditions of which we have made mention, al most insure us immunity from the dread disease under which so many towns on the Mississippi are suffer ing. That Our Texas climate is unpleasantly dry, and warm is not be deni-ed; and that it is disagreeably dusty about town, is equally incontrovertible; but for gorgeous sunsets, Tex-as beais the world and an evening drive over the prairie with breeze ever fresh from Eolus, combines attrac tions and pleasures nowhere sun passed in either kind or degree.
